Darts have the following features, if they are the same weapon that you are using to create them:.. You are immune to the effects of all conditions that affect damage to characters or creatures, including sleep, paralysis, disease and sleep.

Darts are weapons. These weapons are not made of crystal. You may fire two darts at once, but the ammunition must come from two feet in front of you, and three darts coming together are equivalent to 1-D6 bolts. If a creature has no weapon-trained darts, it has to make a successful attack roll against the target. If it manages to throw a dart at you instead, you must make a second strike against it with that dart before being able to damage it. There are no special rules for throwing darts.

You don't know how many darts you have, although you can't determine how many darts you have without the aid of the spells d2d3 (dart) and d4d6 (dart). You know how many darts are already active and are in the "active" category. You have to expend one dart to throw them.. Darts have a weight equal to 1d4 + your Dexterity modifier + your weapon training (dart modifier may
